Course Description

Introduction to traditional oral and contemporary Native American texts with an emphasis on cultural contexts and continuity. Considers Native American works in their national, historical, cultural, geographical, political, and legal contexts.

Course learning outcomes

1. Explain broad features of the history and experience of Native Americans in the United States and situate individual texts within that history.
2. Identify and analyze common and/or recurring themes in Native American literature and culture, such as: generational conflict; the American Dream; cultural identity; the journey motif; accommodation and assimilation; conflict with dominant American culture and ethics; media representations.
3. Analyze and interpret Native American texts representing a range of geographical origins, cultural traditions, and experiences.
4. Apply disciplinary knowledge specific to the humanities, including textual analysis and close-reading practices, to the treatment of events, issues, and/or ideas and identify how that knowledge differs from the approach of another academic discipline.
5. Synthesize multiple viewpoints and perspectives, including one's own, in order to critically analyze values, ethics, and other relevant topics within a range of human experience and expression.
